Introduction

My great-grandfather John (Janos) Meszaros (1869-1945) was the tenth child born to Anna Meszaros in the town of Csurgo in Fejer County, Hungary (now called Fehervarcsurgo).

John's church baptismal and birth record indicates that he was illegitimate ("törvénytelen") and that Anna's husband, Peter Szabo was deceased. So, John's nine older brothers and sisters had their father's surname (Szabo) and John used his mother's surname (Meszaros).

When I searched all of the Csurgo records last year I thought that John was Anna Meszaros's last child, but just this week I discovered a birth record for Zsofia (Sophie) Meszaros, born in 1872. Sophie's record (attached) also states that she is illegitimate ("törvénytelen"), so we don't know her father. So great-grandpa John had a younger sister. Welcome, Sophie, to our Meszaros family!

By the way, in those times there was a high infant mortality rate, so it was common to see two or three children with the same first name. When a young child died another child often would be given the same name. So in 1866 Peter Szabo and Anna Meszaros had a daughter named Zsofia. Then in 1872 Anna named her daughter Zsofia again. My guess is that the first Zsofia might have died and Anna "recycled" the name, as appears to have been customary, but I don't have the first Zsofia's death record to confirm this.

I retrieved all of the church birth/baptismal records of John's brothers and sisters (surname Szabo) at FamilySearch.org and included them in my first volume, "Meszaros Family History: Hungarian Ancestors." The only one who

I have any additional information on is one of John's older sisters, Julianna, more on her a bit later.

In 1894, at the age of 25, John married Elizabeth (Erzsebet) Cseh, 19 years old, in his hometown of Csurgo. In their marriage record, under the column listing parents, the church marriage record shows only Anna Meszaros for John, so we will most likely never find John's birth father.

Elizabeth's parents are listed as Janos Cseh and Julianna Egyed in the village of Kiskeszi (also spelled Kis-Keszi), less than 10 miles from Csurgo. Here it is on Google Maps:
https://www.google.com/maps/place/S%C3%A1rkeszi,+Kiskeszi,+8144+Hungary/@47.1517685,18.2666892,10z/data=!4m5!3m4!1s0x4769f39a467ec529:0x2600c42a07fbe3a2!8m2!3d47.1517609!4d18.2690089

I haven't explored the Cseh branch of the family but I did find that FamilySearch.org has birth, marriage, and death records for that town from 1719 to 1976, so some of our Cseh branch records should be there:
https://www.familysearch.org/search/catalog/results?count=20&placeId=74144&query=%2Bplace%3A%22Hungary%2C%20Fej%C3%A9r%2C%20Kiskeszi%22&subjectsOpen=1052174-50,431117-50

John and Elizabeth Meszaros then had nine children in Csurgo. Their first was our Uncle John (Janos) Meszaros, then Elizabeth (Erzsebet; our Grammy), Julianna, Joseph (Joszef), Katherine (Katalin), Mary (Maria), Steven (Istvan), Matthew (Matyas), and Carl (Karoly). I also included all of their birth records in the first volume on the Meszaros Family in Hungary.

Their last child, Carl, was born a few months after John and daughter Elizabeth (Grammy) arrived in South Milwaukee in 1913. Then in 1917 his wife Elizabeth Cseh died of tuberculosis, according to her death record. I don't have any records showing that John ever returned to Hungary, so it's likely that after he arrived in the USA in 1913 he never saw his family again, never saw his son Carl after he was born, nor his wife Elizabeth before she died.

One of John's daughters, Mary (Maria), married Lajos (Louis) Bata in 1929 and they had only one child, a daughter named Jolan, who married Janos Soros. Jolan and Janos and two sons, Janos and Attila. Aunt Helen (Szatmary) Papierski is Attila's godmother and she and Jolan and their families exchanged around 100 letters and greeting cards from around 1956 until Jolan's death in 1989.

Thanks to Aunt Helen for mailing me all of her correspondence with Jolan and her family!

From the return addresses on the envelopes that Aunt Helen sent me I was able to locate our cousin Attila Soros because the return addresses are the same address where Attila is still living today in Budapest. So I mailed him a letter in 2018 and we have since exchanged a few dozen emails and photos. Unfortunately since Attila doesn't know English and I don't know Hungarian we have to rely on Google Translate and it doesn't always give a good translation. I've also tried Microsoft's Bing Translate and it's even less accurate than Google Translate.

When John and daughter Elizabeth (Grammy) arrived in South Milwaukee in 1913, John's son John Meszaros (Grammy's brother) had already been there for almost a year. Son John arrived with his aunt, Julianna Csaktornyai, who was one of his father's older sisters, born Julianna Szabo. (Note: Neither father John nor son John ever used a middle name or initial and neither one ever identified himself as Sr. or Jr., but I will refer to them as Sr. and Jr. to distinguish one from the other.)

John Jr. has a long paper trail and I already collected all of his records in a separate volume. We have his 1895 birth record from Csurgo, Hungary (now called Fehervarscurgo) and his passenger ship record from 1912. Nine years after arriving in South Milwaukee he filed his First Papers ("Declaration of Intention" to become a citizen) in 1921. John then moved to the Los Angeles area in 1923 where he filed his Second Papers ("Petition for Naturalization") and finally became a citizen in 1929.

We also have John Jr.'s World War I and II draft registrations from 1918 and 1942, his listings in Los Angeles city directories, his voting records in California until 1948, his application for a Social Security pension in 1957, and finally his death certificate from Tonopah, Nevada in 1958.

John Sr., on the other hand, has a very short paper paper trail. We only have his 1869 birth record from Csurgo, Hungary, his 1894 marriage record, his passenger ship record from 1913, and his listing in the 1940 census. That's it!

As I mentioned above Anna Meszaros had 9 previous sons and daughters with husband Peter Szabo, who all have his surname. We may never find out much about them, they are a lost branch of our Hungarian family, except for one person.

That person is Julianna (Szabo) Csaktornyai!

Julianna was Anna and Peter Szabo's third child, born in 1853, according to her church birth/baptismal record. I found two passenger ship records showing that she traveled from Hungary to the United States first in 1905 and again in 1912, when she returned with her nephew Janos (John Jr.). The 1912 record shows that she lived in the United States from 1904-1912 and that she paid for John Jr.'s passage.

Another thing that I noticed in her passenger ship record is in col. 16 it shows that she arrived with $400, an astronomical sum in those days. Most passengers list $15-40! Julianna's occupation is listed as cook, so I'm wondering where she got all that money from?

I'm assuming that there must have been a close connection between Julianna (Szabo) Csaktornyai and her nephew John Jr., otherwise, why would she have paid for his voyage to the USA? So, I'm assuming that she was also close to her brother, John Sr.

Unfortunately, the only records I have for Julianna are her birth record in Csurgo, Hungary, and her passenger ship lists from 1905 and 1912 (see attached). I did not find any census records, marriage record, city directory listings, or a death record for her, so I don't where she lived in the USA except for South Milwaukee, or where she worked, or when, or where she died (USA? Hungary?)

John Sr. does not show up in the 1920 or 1930 censuses. He only shows up in the 1940 census, living in South Milwaukee with Paul and Elizabeth's family, and then he died in 1945.

Aunt Helen (Szatmary) Papierski told me that she doesn't remember her grandfather John Meszaros (John Sr.) working. She remembers him living in the unfinished basement of their house in South Milwaukee (at 1320 Michigan Avenue), while her parents and the 9 children lived on the first floor. I believe the second floor was kind of an unfinished attic. I recall my mother, Betty (Szatmary) Jankowski telling me that her dad, grandpa Paul Szatmary (or was it John Sr.?), made wine in the attic during Prohibition!

I recently received from my niece Nikki (Nicole) Jankowski a treasure trove of about 500 family photos which are in the possession of my sister Patricia A.

(Jankowski)(Burtz) Jones, in Ingleside, Illinois. One of the photos is of John Sr. with his bicycle, and my mother's note that he was living in New Jersey at the time (about 1938?)

Julianna (Szabo) Csaktornyai's passenger ship record for 1905 shows that her contact person in the United States was in Alpha, New Jersey, which is close to Pennsylvania. So it's possible that we have distant cousins in that area and John Sr. may have stayed with them. Here is the Wiki on Alpha: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Alpha,_New_Jersey

Another passenger ship record from 1902 appears to be for Julianna's husband, Janos (John) Csaktornyai. It shows that he was 40 years old, a blacksmith by trade (like grandpa Paul Szatmary), and he traveled from Budapest to arrive in Baltimore, with Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania as his final destination.

Also, Aunt Helen said her mother ("Grammy") told her that after arriving in New York from Hungary in 1913, Grammy and her father John Sr. stayed in Utica, New York for a while before arriving in South Milwaukee.

So maybe we have distant cousins in New York and/or New Jersey and/or Pennsylvania, on the Meszaros/Szabo/Csaktornyai side.

It's possible that John Sr. moved among various family members, such as daughter Elizabeth (Grammy) and her family in South Milwaukee, or his sister Julianna and her family on the East Coast. In that scenario John would have had a free room (albeit pretty Spartan by today's standards!) and maybe he earned enough money at odd jobs to pay for his food and incidentals, like bus and train fares, or an occasional movie admission for 10 cents in those days!

Before arriving in the USA John Sr. spent most of his life in the small town of Csurgo (now called Fehervarcsurgo) in Hungary, where he lived a rural life and had no experience working in factories. So when he arrived in the United States in 1913, at the age of 44, he had few marketable job skills and he didn't know the English language. His son-in-law Paul Szatmary, Grammy's husband, on the other hand, is listed in several records as being a blacksmith and he was able to transition into being a factory worker at Bucyrus Erie in South Milwaukee. One census record says he was a steam shovel operator.

I suspect that John Sr. was traumatized by his immigration experience and that led him to an unsettled life.

When John Sr. arrived in 1913 with daughter Elizabeth, his wife Elizabeth (Cseh) was pregnant with their son, Carl (born December 20, 1913). Then in 1914 World War I began in Europe and just three years later in 1917 his new country, the United States, was at war with his native country, Hungary. Also in 1917 his wife Elizabeth died of tuberculosis ("sorvadis") so now his remaining seven children in Hungary were motherless and fatherless. Then after World War I, the Treaty of Trianon carved up Hungary in 1920 so it lost two-thirds or its territory. Talk about an existential crisis!

So in the USA John was a stranger in a strange land. He lost his wife and, he never saw his new-born son Carl nor did he ever see any of his other six children or other relatives in Hungary again. His old country was shattered by war and dismemberment and in 1920 at the age of 51 he he had no marketable job skills, and he did not have the money to bring the rest of his family in Hungary to the USA. And he never re-married after his wife Elizabeth died, to create a new household in this country.

My guess is that great-grandpa John did seasonal work, such as picking fruit in orchards and other farm work in the summertime, and other odd jobs.

And since John was born in 1869, he was already 68 when the Social Security Act came into effect in 1937, and the first Social Security pension checks were not distributed until 1940, so John Sr. almost certainly never contributed to Social Security to receive a pension. (https://www.history.com/topics/great-depression/social-security-act)

Looking back in time, I'm glad that my great-grandfather John Meszaros had family members that cared for him, supported him, and helped shelter him. He didn't become rich or famous, but if he never made the big voyage across the Atlantic Ocean with his daughter Elizabeth (Grammy) in 1913, none of us would be here today. If we had been born in Hungary during that time period we would have had to live through the horrors of World War I, World War II and the Holocaust, the Nazi Occupation of Hungary, then Communism and the Soviet invasion of 1956. So thank you great-grandpa John Meszaros for making the voyage across the Atlantic in 1913 in search of a better life. You went through some hard times here but you helped create a better future for your children and their children and grandchildren!

Fehérvárcsurgó

(Fejér County)

Triangular shield erect and azure. In base an irregularly shaped mound vert. Below the mound base is divided by a bend argent. From the middle of the mound a spring is issuing, its water argent is straightforwardly 'running' down as far as the silver bend. In the centre of the shield a stylised oak tree or is issuing from the top of the mound. Tree is decorated with two acorns and three leaves, all or. At the upper edge of the blue shield two smaller triangular escutcheons are borne encouped. The one on the dexter side is party per fess with seven bends gules and argent. Sinister shield gules, on ground sable a crenellated castle wall of bricks argent is borne. Its gate opens in the middle of the wall and a tower roofed or and walled argent is raising above it.

The meaning of Fehérvárcsurgó's coat-of-arms can be interpreted as follows:

Fehérvárcsurgó is an ancient settlement, its history goes back to the age of the Hungarian Conquest. The settlement's first written mention goes back to a document of 1227, in which the village appeared by the the name 'CSORGÓ'. The constituent anterior of the settlement's name, the word FEHÉRVÁR was adopted one hundred years ago with the purpose of distinguishing the settlement from another village named Csurgó (Somogy County).

The settlement's coat-of-arms is one of the so-called canting arms, since it tells onlookers about the origin, the history and the geographical location of the village. The irregularly shaped green mound is a reference to the nearby Bakony Hills, since Fehérvárcsurgó lies at the western edge of the rift valley of Mór. The stylised oak tree borne on the top of the mound symbolises the one-time vast wooded areas of the Bakony Hills. A similar charge, a stylised oak branch can be seen in the coat-of-arms of the neighbouring Veszprém County.

The spring water issuing from the hillside (csorgó, or csurgó) is a motif, referring to the settlement's name. When selecting their dwelling places the conquering Hungarians preferred areas with clear spring water.

The silver bend, which divides the base into two, symbolises Gaja Brook, which is to be found in the outer field of the settlement. Int he past as many as three water mills were fed by its water. It was the damming up of this water which made the existence of Fehérvárcsurgó's popular storage lake possible. The appearance of the smaller, striped shield in the village's coat-of-arms is a reminder of the Hungarian Conquest and the origin of the settlement.

The charge of the 'white castle/fehérvár' appearing in the other smaller shield tells us about the name of the settlement; it is a reference to the anterior constituent of Fehérvárcsurgó's name.

In summary it can be stated that although plain and common heraldic charges are borne in Fehérvárcsurgó's coat-of-arms, its composition is unique and special.

The geographical characteristics of the settlement can be described as follows:

Fehérvárcsurgó is located in Fejér County int he rift valley of Mór between the Vértes and the Bakony Hills. The village was built in the valley of the Gaja Brook and on the mounds on its western bank. These heights are parts of the Bakony's last range. The village lies at a distance of 12 kilometres from the town of Mór and at 15 kilometres from the county seat, Székesfehérvár. The most significant geographical feature of the settlement is its storage lake with an area of 89 hectares, which was established in the early 1970s and which was named after the settlement. The Gaja gorge and the densely wooded area to the northwest of it are currently under protection.

The history of the settlement can be described as follows:

The oldest finds proving the existence of a human settlement in the area are the remains of an early Iron Age earthwork which can be found on the castle hill. The area was also inhabited in the period of the Roman Empire, a fact, which can be proven by the remains of a contemporary stone dam. It was unearthed when the storage lake of Fehérvárcsurgó was being established and it proves that the Romans also tried to dam the water of the Gaja Brook .The nine mounds in the vicinity of the settlement called Hunhalmok hide graves, which go back to the period of the Hungarian Conquest.

According to the findings of recent research the first documented mention of the settlement's name goes back to 1193 and to the form Chergeu. This word is a reference to the village brook, abounding then in water. In the Árpád age King Endre II bestowed the settlement on the crusaders of Fehérvár. From the early 14th century onward it was mentioned as the property of the nearby Castle of Csókakő and it was very likely that the village in that period was owned by the members of the Csák clan. King Károly Róbert, who defeated Máté Csák, made it a royal property. The village had a parish church of its own as early as 1333. King Sigismund pawned Fehérvárcsurgó and the neighbouring castle of Csókakő to the members of the Rozgonyi family. The first local census and tax records go back to the year 1519. It is interesting to note from that period that in addition to paying with their common crops the inhabitants of Csurgó paid their tax in cabbage heads. This custom prevailed for long, which means that cabbage was one of the most important agricultural plants in the area. When the settlement's coat-of-arms was created in 1999 the inclusion of a cabbage head as charge was also considered. The other characteristic feature of Fehérvárcsurgó was its many water mills Int he early Middle Ages there were as many as four of them along the banks of the Gaja Brook and the millers of Csurgó formed their own guilds. The production of wine is also worth mentioning, but the local wine has a bit of sour taste, its quality is poorer than the quality of the wines of nearby Mór. Animal husbandry also played a role in local economy.

After the fall of Székesfehérvár (1543) the Győr-Mór- Fehérvár route became a major military route. In the period of the Turkish Conquest Fehérvárcsurgó was taxed both by the Turks and the Hungarians. The Turks allowed the officials of Veszprém County to exercise power in their village and the villeins of the settlement served their Hungarian landlords as well. It was in this period that the ownership of the settlement was obtained by the members of the Nádasdy family. Fehérvárcsurgó did never get depopulated. The name of the settlement's Turkish landlord (Abdula Zahay) was also recorded by contemporary documents. In 1690, when the Turks were expelled from the country, nine large and eight smaller houses were abandoned in the village. Resettlement was fast and easy, the inhabitants were Hungarians and by their religious faith they were mostly Calvinists. According to records from the period of Emperor Joseph II as many as 1100 people lived at Fehérvárcsurgó at that time. Following Wesselényi's anti-Habsburg plot the Csókakő property was confiscated from the Nádasdys, its ownership was taken over by the Royal Chamber then by the members of the Hochburg family. Through the female line of this family the property got into the hands of the Perényis. In 1843 they pawned it to the members of the Károlyi family, who later became the owners of the entire property. Following this change of ownership the Károlyi family played a decisive role in the settlement's life. In 1844-45 they built an impressive, European-scale family mansion to replace their former modest dwelling place. György Károlyi was the first owner, then the village was inherited by Bailiff Joseph Károlyi, his grandson, an outstanding politician of the era of the Hungarian War of Independece. The counts Károlyi always played an impotant role in the settlement's life. It was also them who paid the costs of the introduction of street lighting. In 1945, when estates were distributed among farmers, the Károlyi property was also parcelled out. The agricultural cooperative was established in 1946, the Károlyi mansion became the property of the capital's Gas Works.

Fehérvárcsurgó was not part of major military events since the Turkish Era, but the settlement and its inhabitants suffered a lot during the second world war. The front lines were in the vicinity of the village for three months. Only 15 habitable homes were to be found at Fehárvárcsurgó when the war came to an end. The number of local inhabitants exceeded 2000 from the 1920s onward. The village got the name Fehérvárcsurgó in 1898 in order to distinguish it from Csurgó in Somogy County. From 1921 to 1964 Rákhegy was administratively part of the settlement. In the 1920s a search for coal was carried out in the village, but interestingly bauxite mining became the major occupation in the area instead. In order to explore the bauxite ore of the Rákhegy area the water of the Gaja Brook was diverted and the storage lake was established so as to get cheap water for industrial use.

If considering the small regions of Hungary, statistically Fehérvárcsurgó belongs to the zone of attraction of Székesfehérvár, but it is also a member of the Association of Settlements in the Mór region.
